

Are You Marketing On The Internet?

Contributed by Webmaster
Sunday, 11 November 2007
Last Updated Sunday, 11 November 2007

More info...
By Ann Liu

Take a moment and think about how you would really answer this question.

If given enough thought to any business owner who utilizes the Internet for any purpose, you will likely find that they may already market their products and services on the Internet; no matter they do it intentionally or not.

To avoid the confusion, here is the question - do you have a website for your business?

As a business owner, if your answer is yes, then you are already marketing your products or services on the Internet. Your living website will bring in those potential internet users who are curious about your business.

You might say that you have done nothing to your website and you didn't put much time actively promote it, believe it or not, still, you will probably find that your website generates interest to your products.

If you like others - participate in those message boards and include your website link to your in your signature field, then you are already marketing your website online.

In other words, let's say you want to create an interest for your products or services and establish yourself, if you are a savvy business owner, you understand it is important to participate in the industry related message board because you know it can help you get some exposure. Even those business owners who do not realize this may already inadvertently enjoy the benefits of internet marketing, they may just through doing something they enjoy as a form of leisure activity, such as post the answers to other people's questions that listed on the board.

Furthermore, if you have already included those keywords in the content of your website that relevant to your business, then you are already marketing your business on the Internet. You may not notice it when it happens but because you know how to often use certain words in a natural and logical way, then you know how to optimize your website for these keywords.

Your tendency for these particular keywords could result in search engines to boost your website rankings. The concept of SEO is much more involved and complex than simply using keywords frequently, as a business owner; you can gain a lot of benefits just by naturally applying relevant keywords to your website.

On the other hand, from a business point of view, if you solicit feedback from your customers online, then again, you already start to market your business on the Internet. You may do this through online surveys, but the fact is it is online already and it falls into the category of Internet marketing.

Now we have already discussed several ways in which business owners may already be marketing their business online, but what about those owners who want to have an increased online presence and wish to launch a full scale Internet marketing campaign?

The best way to do this is to hire an experience Internet marketing consultant to assist you; because the expertise he or she has can help you creating an effective campaign for your target audience.

So if you want to enhance your Internet marketing campaign but you are not keen on it, then find a person who knows how to do it to help you maximum the earnings.

Article Source : Article King Pro - Free Reprints and Distribution

Ann Liu, internet marketer and author of Online Profiting: Easy Ways To Start and Build Your Own Online Business. To learn how YOU too can succeed in Internet and affiliate marketing, please visit <http://Marketingbyann.com>

Multi Level Marketing

{mos_sb_discuss:2}